The River Spey at Aberlour in Moray
The River Spey (Scottish Gaelic: Uisge Spè) is a river in the northeast of Scotland, the second longest and the fastest flowing river in Scotland. It is important for salmon fishing and whisky production.

The Foundations Of Civilization And Nationhood

By The Rev. David R. Graham

First of all, civilization EXISTS so long as someone plays “The St. Anne” this well:

These only are the responsibilities of national government:

Six inches or more of fertile top soil.

Clean water and sewage.

Abundant trees.

Protection of monasteries and creation and protection of judiciaries.

Creation, maintenance and commitment to warfare, upon military necessity and under military rules, judgment and decision, of combat-ready national defense forces.

The Foundations Of Civilization And Nationhood

By The Rev. David R. Graham

These only are the responsibilities of state and local governments:

Six inches or more of fertile top soil.

Clean water and sewage.

Abundant trees.

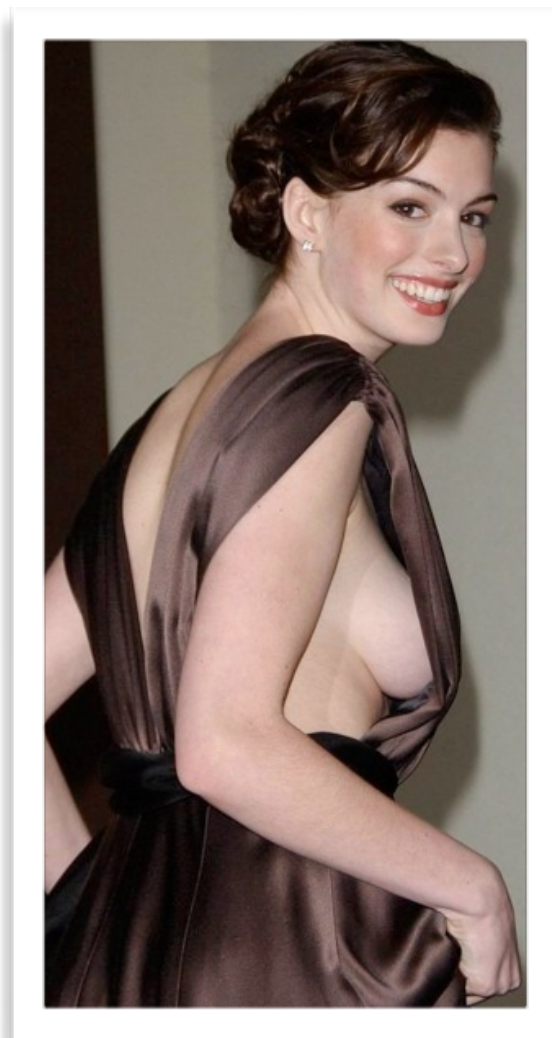

Protection of monasteries and creation and protection of judiciaries.

Creation, maintenance and commitment to crime-free cities, towns, villages and countryside of high-ready state and local police forces operating under policing rules, judgment and decision.
