

Rent - Seeking , Power - Junkie Females

There is so very much that should be neither legal nor illegal, but simply unthinkable. I think when laws proliferate it means a society is degenerating into pieces. And the effusion of laws hastens the parting of ways. Then only a majority opinion can hold sway and only on the notion that numerical might makes moral and social right. And that way is un-American, beyond partisan and into total suppression of differences. Including total suppression of information. For, information is a difference that makes a difference. I can think of only love and beauty as the way back from and forward through the horror of total suppression of differences. A lot of women are going to have to die in the fight to clean the nation of rent-seeking, power-junkie females who control her processes. Men won't do it, at least not in initiation. Harming a woman is inimical to a man's nature. Women will have to put themselves in grave risk requiring protection of men, a man's natural role, in order to turn the corner on rent-seeking, power-junkie females.
