Republican Future? Rule 5 Wednesday

By The Rev. David R. Graham

Dan Riehl composed today one of his trademark sage posts. I commented as follows:

After 1968, the base of the Democratic Party -- Unitarians, Quakers, Progressives, Leftists, Socialists, Communists, Mohammedans -- worked assiduously to control by leading the party machinery nationwide. Successful.

After 2008, the base of the Republican Party -- Conservatives, Libertarians, Free Marketers ("Libertarian Conservatives," whose profile includes Democrats) -- are advised to work assiduously to control by leading the party machinery nationwide. Can be successful.

Regrettably, this is the second vector down which Americans are obliged to play catchup to Unitarians, Communists, Quakers and Mohammedans, the first being internet organizing, which will grow more difficult now for traffic to/from domains not tributary to those affiliated structures.

Not Riehl World View, but a large number of Conservative blogs are given to fear-mongering, sarcasm, gloating and edginess for the sake of self-promotion. Those qualities are not suited to leadership or control of political or any other cultural creativity.

Cry freedom and do it for others and that will be sufficient.
