

THEOLOGICAL GEOGRAPHY

April 11, 2009

The River Dee
Near Braemar,
Aberdeenshire,
Scotland.

Roundhead Theocrats Puritans In The White House And Congress

By The Rev. David R. Graham

The militants occupying the White House, the Congressional Majority Leadership, the liberal arts faculties, the legacy media, Code Pink, ACORN, Daily Kos, and the like are zealots with fanatical, faux-religious fervor.

They preen themselves as prophets.

Their fanaticism descends from Cromwell's Roundheads and the extremist Covenanters of the Scottish Kirk.

These are grim, intolerant theocrats intent on dominating society in the name of God, themselves His sole revealers.

The Roundheads came to America as Puritans, Separatists and Congregationalists, calling themselves the first settlers of America. They came for freedom of conscience only their own. None other would they tolerate.

They were not the first settlers of America and they did not bequeath America religious tolerance, equality before the law, freedom of speech or political, educational or economic opportunity.

Today they still hold hotly as the source and support of these virtues. But they are not. They are proponents of shifting ideologies of their own choosing but having always the common feature of assumed superiority, right to rule and obligation to punish.

This makes them fanatics, theocrats motivated by faux-religious zeal and it instructs them in the supercilious posture familiar from fascism and communism.

Their religion is themselves and so their God is not God. It is arrays of their own handiwork.

Roundhead Theocrats Puritans In The White House And Congress

By The Rev. David R.. Graham

Idols, in other words, just like Mohammedans, which explains their appeasement of Mohammedans and apologies for Mohammedan but not Christian “religious rights.”

They became Unitarians and Presbyterians as well as Congregationalists. Congregationalists formed the United Church of Christ and like all Roundhead descendants promote “Black Liberation Theology.”

Inside the theocratic fervor of these Roundheads, a systemic hypocrisy perverts their character and destroys their plans. This may be illustrated by reference to acts of two of their most famous representatives.

When President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation, eight slave states adhered to the Union side and seven to the Confederate. Lincoln exempted the eight Union-adhering slave states from the Emancipation Proclamation.

Two years after the slaughter of Ross women in 1854 by constables under the direction of Alexander of Munro, Harriet Beecher Stowe, the soi-disant abolitionist author of Uncle Tom’s Cabin, wrote Sunny Memories Of Foreign Lands.

ॐka Samastha Sukhino Bhavanthu

ॐka Samastha Sukhino Bhavanthu

ॐka Samastha Sukhino Bhavanthu

Therein she defends the infamous Elizabeth, 19th Countess of Sutherland and 2nd Duchess of Sutherland, from near universal condemnation of her and her husband’s cruel and murderous eviction of tenant farmers from their Sutherland estate ... to make room for sheep.

Elizabeth’s husband, the Duke, was Marquess of Stafford in England in his own right and was made Duke of Sutherland in Scotland by William IV in 1833. Sutherland was Elizabeth’s dowery into the marriage. He was the richest man in Great Britain before marrying Elizabeth.

Harriet Beecher Stowe was twice an honored guest of this Duke and Duchess of Sutherland at their Castle, Dunrobin.

While there, she failed to notice the significance of the empty glens, as did Queen Victoria when she visited the same establishment, calling it a palace to her house, Balmoral Castle, on the River Dee.

Clan Graham

Thousands of people had been living in those very glens. Now it was ruins and sheep. Neither Elizabeth nor Victoria took notice, much less made inquiries or remonstrance.

Elizabeth and her husband had the people turned out in the cold without possessions, their homes torched within minutes of being told they had to leave, their animals screaming in pain and the confusion of death, a cat thrown repeatedly into the blaze of one home until she perished, the elderly brutalized and simply frightened to death, women and children beaten and frightened to death.

And Elizabeth's directing agent acquitted of murder by a jury of fellow landowners.

The authoress and author of it all, Harriet Beecher Stowe, defended against their condemners, who were not a few but none in Parliament, while unleashing her supercilious sarcasm on Southern, although not Northern, slave owners.

This is the hypocrisy of the Roundhead theocrat, the self-righteous, soi-disant director of history by self-interest.

And this is who occupies the White House of the United States, directs the Majority Party of Congress and is the prunelle de l'oeil of liberal arts faculties, entertainment barons and "community organizers."

Acolytes of this hypocrisy its authors want dominating the people of the United States in their name as their "domestic security force." Territorial Army is what the English call it.

They intend to dominate the people of the world. Legacy media operators refer to this agenda approvingly as "messianic." Realists call it fraudulent.

Fraudulent indeed, and fascist. Roundhead theocrat is the proper description, bearing as it does historical relevancy.

These zealots have a definite history: Roundhead, Congregational, extremist Presbyterian.

They cannot be deflected from their aim, only made unable to accomplish it. And they operate like Mohammedans in this particular, that they continually metamorphose into new formations for attack on culture.

