

Theological Geography

Drummond Castle and Gardens

Drummond Castle in Muthill parish is a little south of Crieff, Perthshire, Scotland. The oldest part is a tower-house built over several years by Sir John Drummond of Cargill, following the issue of a royal warrant by King James III in 1491.

The Rev. David R. Graham
November 20, 2009

The End Of Communism?

Paul Hollander on “the fall of Communism.”

My comment:

Negative. The Soviet Union and East Germany fell. They were nation states, which can fall in the sense of cease to exist because they are mundane structures, like bodies.

Communism is alive and well, usually as co-opted legitimate concerns, such as equal justice (co-opted to "diversity"), tolerance (co-opted to "multiculturalism") and ecological and medical sanity (co-opted to "environment" and "health care," respectively), and enforced by terrorist ideologies ("protected class" and "political correctness").

Communism is an ideology and ideologies neither fail nor fall nor cease to exist because they inhabit a dimension of life which transcends the merely mundane, the potentially fall-able: <http://bit.ly/2VGSgI>

Comments

Sara Varone
Click Here For Motion

Elizabeth Ashley